Your Observations of God’s Goodness

We know that God is at work in our lives every day. But sadly, all too often, we are so preoccupied with our daily activities and pressures that we don’t notice or acknowledge His presence. And even when we do recognize His involvement in the circumstances of our day, it is usually a momentary insight that is soon forgotten.

Start keeping a record of these instances in My Observations of God's Love and Goodness. During your devotional time jot down the special things you noticed during the previous day or days. Just write a phrase or sentence for each item—enough to remind you in the future of what God did.

Some entries are “biggies”—like being protected from an accident, receiving something you critically needed, or an answer to a prayer. But many entries may recount little things that happened which you noticed as being a special reminder of God's involvement in your day.

The item doesn't have to be impressive—it just needs to be something that the Holy Spirit helped you notice as a special sign of God's love and goodness.

This routine will make you more aware of God's presence and involvement—especially in the more mundane events of daily life. Consequently, you spend more time talking to Him throughout the day. And, periodically, when you review past entries, your faith will be encouraged.
