

JesusOnline Equip

Ministry Resources Hub

Impulse Control and the Key to Character

A free resource from JesusOnline Ministries.

Read or share online: app.jesonline.com/post/22220-016-impulse-control-and-the-key-to-character

JesusOnline Equip · Ministry Resources Hub · equip.jesonline.com

Free media and discipleship resources for pastors, leaders, and growing disciples.

Impulse Control and the Key to Character

Do not join with those who drink too much wine, or gorge themselves on meat; for drunkards and gluttons become poor, and drowsiness clothes them in rags. (Proverbs 23:20- 21)

The late Dr. Armand Nicoli was an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital. As he looked back on his lifelong career as a psychiatrist, he noted a striking pattern shift. When he began his career, he says the maladies facing him in his practice dealt a lot with the repression or suppression of impulses. Patients needed to be freed to express themselves and their impulses responsibly. Today, he notes patients suffer from the inability to control the expression of impulses. Most “lack impulse control” and are in bondage to unbridled appetites.

We live and work in a world in which excess is often the norm. Unrestrained anger, sexual addictions, chain-smoking, binge drinking, workaholism, bondage to pornography, drug abuse, consumer spending, and, yes, gluttony leading to obesity characterize many. The word orgy describes the excesses we see around us and which tempt us to binge ourselves.

Principle: The one in bondage to repressed impulses is no more a slave than he who is shackled by lack of control over them.

Solomon knew the dangers of unrestrained human impulses. He knew that the character weakness which causes a person to lose impulse control in one area often extends to other areas of excess. So he warned against even associating with those lacking impulse control lest we succumb to the pattern of excess.

Principle: Associating with friends who lack restraint over their appetites exposes us to their contagious virus of excess.

The inevitable link to financial irresponsibility cannot be missed in Solomon’s warning. It’s as if the wise king is saying, “Show me a person who can’t control his eating and drinking, and I’ll show you a person who can’t control his spending.”

Bingeing in any area is expensive, but more than the direct cost seems to be the spillover lack of self-control which makes us slaves to financial debt. The pattern eventually “clothes us in rags.”

Principle: If it is true that “a fool and his money are soon parted,” it’s equally true that one who binges on anything else will likely binge on spending and borrowing.

Fascinating, then, that the apostle Paul packages “self-control” in with the fruit of the Spirit of Christ in Galatians 5:22-23. Noteworthy, too, that I can’t stay on a diet or exercise program without conscious reliance on the power of the Holy Spirit within me. I guess only God can override sin’s gravitational pull into excess.

Principle: Financial poverty and bankruptcy begin where lack of control of other impulses leave off.

[from “Wisdom for the Trenches” by Dr. Larry W. Poland]